Source: Correlates of linguistic rhythm in the speech signal (Ramus, Nesp, Mehler)

"Thus %V and DC both seem to support the notion of stress-, syllable- and mora-timed languages. However, DV suggests that there may be more to speech rhythm than just these distinctions; this variable, although correlated with the two others, rather emphasizes differences between Polish and the other languages."

Uncomfortable situation
